

IPT

Director'sReport	1
BackgroundandContext	2
HistoryofIPT	2
IPTin2001/2002
CriminalJustice	4
SafetyinEducation	.5
Work inruralcommunities	.6
Consultancywork	7
Publications, Trustees, Personnel	.8

Director's Report

AsIPT embarked on its second decade of operation our efforts h a v e b e e n increasinglyrefinedto focus onworkwithin the criminal justice sector. Over the last two years we have established ourselves as a credibleforce within this sector through the implementationofthefirstphaseofalong term Criminal Justice Strengthening Project. Thissawour previous work with the South African Police Service expanded into an initiative with the KwaZulu-NatalProsecutingAuthorityand local government crime prevention initiatives. We also published Owning Safety: A Profileof CommunityInitiatives during this period which recorded the successes and challenges faced by a range of community based crime prevention projects in KwaZulu-Natal. Thebookisnowbeingwidelyusedasa referencework.

The criminal justice sector niche was furtheraffirmedthroughtheworkthatIPT conductedintheeducationsectorwitha particular focus on safety in schools. In addition to funded programmes that contributetothereductionofcrimeand violencewithin theschoolenvironment, IPTwascontractedbytheDepartmentof Education to conduct school safety workshopsfor400schoolrepresentatives drawnfromacrosstheprovince.

Politicalpartyleadershipandresidentsof theformerlyviolence-stricken Richmond area have been at the centre of our peacebuildingworkinruralcommunities. IPT is in the process of establishing a network of rural mediators from across politicallineswhowillbearesourcetothe community andwillassistinestablishing mechanismsforsustainablepeacein the Richmondarea.

Research on the relationship between amakhosiandlocalgovernmentbecame thefocusofanother book published by IPT, Traditional Leaders:AKwaZulu-Natal Study 1999 to 2001 which was well received and we continue to receive requests for copies. The research was followed bytraining and information to local officials in the requirements and implementation of the Administrative JusticeAct.

Our consultancy work included a literature review for the Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund and an assessment of the factors that hindered effective service deliverywithintheDepartmentofWater AffairsandForestry.Wealsocontributed to the Cato Manor Development Association's documentation project through a paper entitled "Community SafetyandPublicSecurity" and supported the activities of the Peace to the City Campaign of the World Council of Churches, Gun Free South Africa and PlayingForPeace.

My thanks go to everyone who has worked so hard to assist IPT as we've moved wholeheartedly into our second decade. This includes the commitment and support of our funders, the communities with which we work, our Trustees and dedicated staff and the contracted specialists who provide expertisewithinourprojects.

Background & Context

IPTisbasedinDurban,thelargestcityin South Africa's most eastern province, KwaZulu-Natal. Mozambique, Swaziland and Lesotho share borders with the province, as do the South African provincesofMpumalanga,FreeStateand theEasternCape.

KeyinformationaboutKwaZulu-Natal:

- The land area of KwaZulu-Natal makesup7,55%ofSouthAfrica.
- 21% of the population of South Africa liveinKwaZulu-Natal.Of the province's population, approximately 57% live in urban areas.
- KwaZulu-Natal isthefourthpoorest provinceinSouthAfrica.
- TheunemploymentrateinKwaZulu-Natalisestimatedtobeabout40%.
- ImportanturbancentresareDurban, Pietermaritzburg, Richards Bay, Empangeni,Estcourt,Ladysmith and Newcastle.
- Theprovincehasahistoryofpolitical • violence, which dates back to the 1980s Inanelectionin 1999 the two rival political parties, the African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party, formed a coalition government. Late in 2002 Premier Lionel Mtshali from the Inkatha Freedom Party formed a cabinet consisting of his own party, the African National Congress and the Democratic Alliance. The relationship between the Inkatha Freedom Party and the African National Congress continues to be turbulentattimes.
- Political violence in the province doesnotclaimasmanylivesasinthe past but crimeratescontinuetobe high.
- There is a high prevalence of HIV/Aidsintheprovince,butprecise figuresarecontentious.

History

IPT was established in Durbanin 1990 withcorefundingfromAlusafinRichards Bay. The original objective of the organisationwastoprovidecross-cultural and lifeskills workshops to youth in segregated schools. IPT also offered conflict resolution training for political organisationsandcommunitiesandmany oftheearlyinterventionswereconcerned withpoliticalpartiescaughtintheviolent cvclesoftheearlv1990s.IPThasworked withruralcommunitiesinKwaZulu-Natal since1993andduringitshistoryhashad operational officesinEmpangeni,Ulundi and Port Shepstone to further facilitate workinruralareas.IPTnowco-ordinates projectsfromanofficeincentralDurban, with trainers and facilitatorstravelling to projectsites.

SinceitwasformedIPThasendeavoured to remain relevant within a constantly changingenvironment with the work of the organisation primarily focused on safety and security, education, peace buildinganddemocratisation inaddition toothersmallerfocusareas.

In 1996 IPT management realised that whileresearch was often conducted for funders it was not fully utilised by the organisation. Since then the dissemination of research findings and programmedatahasbeenakeyfocusof theworkconductedbyIPT.Thisisdone via web-based publications, public information briefings and more recently, books.

History continued

SafetyandSecurity

From 1995to 2000 IPT provided conflict management training to all SAPS station commissioners in the province followed by numerous projects in conjunction with the SAPS and other role players, like Business Against Crime, aimed at improving service delivery and supporting the transformation process being undertaken by the SAPS.

Ayearlongprojectsupportedthe SAPS Victim Empowerment project in the EasternCapeaswellasKwaZulu-Natal. During this time IPT prepared and distributed maps of police areas which providedstationdetailsanddemographic information.Anauditofexternaltraining services which were provided to SAPS was conducted byIPTonbehalfofthe provincialcommissioner.

Community policing fora received trainingasIPTendeavouredtopromote dialogue between the SAPS and the community in areas that had been disruptedbypoliticalconflict.

In 2000 IPT facilitated an exchange between the Royal Ulster Constabulary andtheSAPSwhichfocusedonthekey challenges to policing in a transitional society. This exchange pulled together the transformation teams from the two servicesandIPTcreatedanenvironment for dialogue and the exchange of experiences.

Education

Following from IPT's early work with schools, the organisation's first peace education programme was launched in 1995andinvolvedtheprovisionofpeer mediation training tonumerousschools inKwaZulu-Natal.Highlevelsofviolence intheprovincecontinuedtobeaconcern and schools were the focus of much of thisviolence.InresponsetheCommunity Alliance for Safe Schools (Cass) was initiatedatabriefingheldbylPTin1997. This alliance consisted of government, non-government, community based and voluntary organisations. TheworkofIPT intheeducationfieldcontinuedwhenthe organisationwasappointedin1998toa committee advising the Culture of Learning, Teaching and Service (Colts) campaignofthenationalDepartmentof Education. The following year IPT, in collaboration with Media in Education Trust, launched a school teaching aid called Peace Begins With Me which enabled teachers to teach conflict resolution and peacekeeping skills with the assistance of visual aids. The organisation also developed Protecting vourSchoolfromViolence andCrime, a userfriendlyguidefor school governing bodies, which was used nationally. A schoolsafetypilotprojectwasinitiatedin three schools in the Durban area in 1999/2000 and an assessment by Dr Clive Harber from the Centre for International Education and Research at the University of Birmingham in the UnitedKingdomwasmadeavailable on IPT's webpage. IPT also conducted a literature review for the national DepartmentofSafetyandSecurity, which examinedthecultureofyouthviolencein urbanschools in SouthAfricaandwhich wasalsomadeavailableontheweb.

IPT in 2001/2002: Criminal Justice

IPT formed a partnership with the KwaZulu-Natal Prosecuting Authority (KZNPA) during this periodtodevelop and test an intervention designed to improve institutional culture and the deliveryofserviceswithintheKZNPA.An initial needs assessment found the problems thatneeded to be addressed included racism, poor communication, theabsenceofastrongsenseofcommon purposeamongstaffandfewsystemsfor internalstressmanagementandsupport.

Interventions, which included skills development workshops, team building initiatives, management development training and strategic planning sessions were provided toprosecutors based at the High Court and the Durban Magistrates' Court. A special emphasis wasplacedonunitswherestresslevelsof staff areexceptionally high, particularly those dealing with sexual offences and offencesperpetratedagainstchildren.

As part of this programme, a projectto monitor absenteeism was implemented at the Durban Magistrates' Court. The project reduced absenteeism amongst prosecutors by 50% through the integrationofhumanresources, industrial relations, health and social services. It assisted managers to identify poor performance and to develop processes that preventsickle aveand absenteeism from becoming unmanageable.

This project will form the basis for an expandedCriminalJusticeStrengthening Projecttoberunoverthenextfiveyears.

IPTalsodocumentedcommunitybased crime prevention initiatives in a project conducted in 2001 and 2002 with funding from the Open Society FoundationforSouthAfrica.

Theprojectculminatedinthepublication of a book entitled Owning Safety: A Profile of Community Initiatives. The researchwasconductedinthecontextof theNationalCrimePrevention Strategy, which was adopted in 1996 as a new approach to crime fighting in South Africa. The strategy emphasised the importance of community participation in crime prevention and IPTidentifieda need for the documentation of the successes, challenges and scope of community based crime prevention initiativesthathavebeenimplementedin KwaZulu-Natal.

Inadditiontodocumentingtheinitiatives, IPT created simple and user friendly guidelines forcommunitiesthatwantto establish crime prevention initiatives or improveoninitiativessetuppreviously.

IPT in 2001/2002: Safety in Education

In2001and2002IPTworkedextensively with school management teams in 14 Durbanschoolsinanefforttocontribute tothe reduction of crime and violence withintheschoolenvironment.

During the early stages of the project, which wasfundedbytheOpenSociety Foundation for South Africa, research established that schools believed that they would benefit from school management training. Primary needs identified related to teambuilding, motivation, planning and strategy development and stress management techniques.

Training workshops for school managementteamsfocusedoncreating school improvement plans, building school communication networks and enhancingleadershipcapacity.

IPTdistributedregularpamphlets, which highlighted debates on management issuesandencourageddiscussionamong the various bodies involved in school safetyissues.

AprogrammeentitledCharacterBuilding intheClassroomwasalsorunduringthis period. It aimed to assist schools to providelearnerswitharangeoftoolsto helpthemchoseapathinlifethatresists violence. This programme was implemented in three schools in the Durbanareaandfocusedparticularlyon core values of refraining from harming others, helpingothers, fairnesstoalland honesty. Anextensionofthisprogrammewasthe Self-esteemBuildingProgrammethatwas pilotedinoneprimaryschoolinaneffort tofocusonyoungerchildrenasopposed tothecharacterbuildingprogrammethat wasconducted in highschools. The aim of these programmes was to help developtheself-esteemofjuniorprimary learnersandtofosteraclassroomculture of mutual respect and acceptance. IPT believes that self-esteem helps to give youngpeopletheconfidencetoexplore, learn and grow, while respect and acceptancearevitalforthedevelopment oflearners'socialskillsandfortheirability toco-existharmoniouslywithinadiverse society.

IPT in 2001/2002: Work in rural communities

In2001IPT, with funding from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, completed a researchproject that examined ways for traditionalleadersandlocalgovernment structures to work together to improve the quality of life in rural communities. The research noted that uncertainty about the role of traditional leaders has contributed to tensions between government and traditional leaders and those who have suffered most are residents of impoverished rural communities who desperately need to benefit from local economic development. Instead, development has beendelayedasaresultofthetensions.

Theresearch, which was published in a book entitled Traditional Leaders: A KwaZulu-NatalStudy1999to2001, found that solutions to the debate about the relationship between the two structures neededtobeworkedoutataverylocal level. IPTarguedthatthesolutionsshould involve individuals from both structures holding discussions to determine their respectiveroleandfunctionsinaneffort todevelopco-operativeandconstructive relationships that support rural development.

In 2001 IPT started a programme that focusedontrainingamakhosiinKwaZulu-Natal. The training is concerned with a number of issues including democracy and decision-making, the South African Constitution, the Administrative Justice Act, fair procedure and customary law. This programme has promoted the relationshipbetweenamakhosiandlocal government and explored the complementary roles of traditional authorities and local government with regardstotheprovisionofservicestothe community.

IPT launched a two-year community based facilitators project in 2002 in Richmond, a rural area that recently emergedfromaperiodofintenseviolent conflict. The project, funded by Joseph RowntreeCharitableTrust, isfocusedon offering new skills to build a climate of democracy. As part of the project, 35 locally based community facilitators will be trained in conflict resolution and peace-buildingtoenablethemtoassistin creating an enabling environment for developmentandgrowth.

IPT in 2001/2002: Consultancy Work

During this period IPT conducted an assessment of the factors that hindered effective service delivery within the Department of Water Affairs and Forestry. This involved interviewing almost200staffmembersandfacilitating the strategic plan for officials from the department.

In addition, IPT produced a research paper on community safety and public security in Cato Manor for the Cato Manor Development Association. The paperwasconcernedwithidentifyingthe sourcesandtypesofcrimeandviolence that emerged in Cato Manorduringthe mid-1990s. It alsolookedatthereasons for the risinglevel ofcrimeandviolence and measurestaken bytheCatoManor DevelopmentAssociationandotherrole playerstocombatcrimeandviolenceas wellaslessonsthatcanbelearnedfrom the Cato Manor situation for other projects.

IPTalsoworkedinKwaMashuandInanda aspartoftheinitialphaseofaPresidential Pilot Programme which was commissioned by the South African PoliceService.Thephasewasconcerned with investigatingsocial problems inthe area in order to inform a community based crime prevention strategy and development programme. The report produced provided a baseline analysis andunderstanding oftheenvironmental andsocialcrimepreventionconstraintsin KwaMashuandInanda.

TheDepartmentofEducationcontracted IPTtoconductschoolsafetyworkshopsin Phoenix,KwaMashuand Inanda. About 400 school representatives attended these two-day workshops and learned how to make their schools safer environments for both themselves and theirpupils. IPTalsofacilitated a school safetyseminarforabout140peoplefrom Inanda. This gave roleplayers, including the police, community policing forum representatives,teachersandparents,the opportunity to communicate with each otheraboutschoolsafetyissues.

IPT was also contracted by the LamontvilleHIV/AidsSupport Centre to conduct a school safety workshop and participated in the provincial interventionsofGunFreeSouthAfrica.

IPT also housed the Playing for Peace initiativewhichcontributestosustainable peacethroughthedevelopmentofcross culturalsportingactivities.

IPT in 2001/2002

Publications

insight@ipt

March2001	SafeCities:
	AMulti-Agency Approach
	toCrimeandViolence
June2001	CrimesIhaveSeen:
	TheStoryofYouth,Guns
	andViolence
August2001	HIV/AidsandYouth:
-	ASchoolBasedResponse
April2002	Trauma:ComingOutofthe
·	Shadows

Books

TraditionalLeaders:AKwaZulu-NatalStudy 1999to2001 ©2002ISBN0-620-28460-9

OwningSafety:AProfileofCommunity Initiatives ©2002ISBN0-620-29597-x

Trustees

BishopRubinPhillip, whowas enthronedastheninthBishop ofNatalinFebruary2000, isthechairpersonofthe BoardofTrustees.

PaulGraham, the executive director of the Institute for Democracy in South Africa (Idasa).

SueBrittion, the manager of the resource team for the Diakonia Council of Churches and an active member of the Anglican Church.

DrDeviRajab, acounselling psychologistandDeanofStudent DevelopmentattheUniversity ofNatal, Durban.

Personnel and Associates

Director: CriminalJustice: ResearchandEvaluation: SchoolSafety: LocalGovernment: CharacterBuildinginSchools: HIV/Aids:

Administration: Publications and Library: TrainingAdministration: StaffAssistant:

Associates:

Glenda Caine IoleMatthews ColinCollettvanRooyen ValerieSmith EdmundMthuli PattiBosmanandBashiDevnarain ThabiKhoza

PearlMackie NomathembaChiliza JanineDickson AndrewLushozi

CherylGoodenough, AnelBeekhan, Boy Mzimela, KhayaGeorge, Melany Bydawelland Jenni Irish.

27th Floor OldMutualCentre 303 WestStreet Durban4001 SouthAfrica Phone:27(31)3058422 Fax: 27(31)3058420 Email: info@ipt.co.za Web:www.ipt.co.za

IPT